Why a process based approach?

- Master the complexity
- Animal IRT should be considered as an organization which may be divided in several processes
- Each process should be analyzed separately

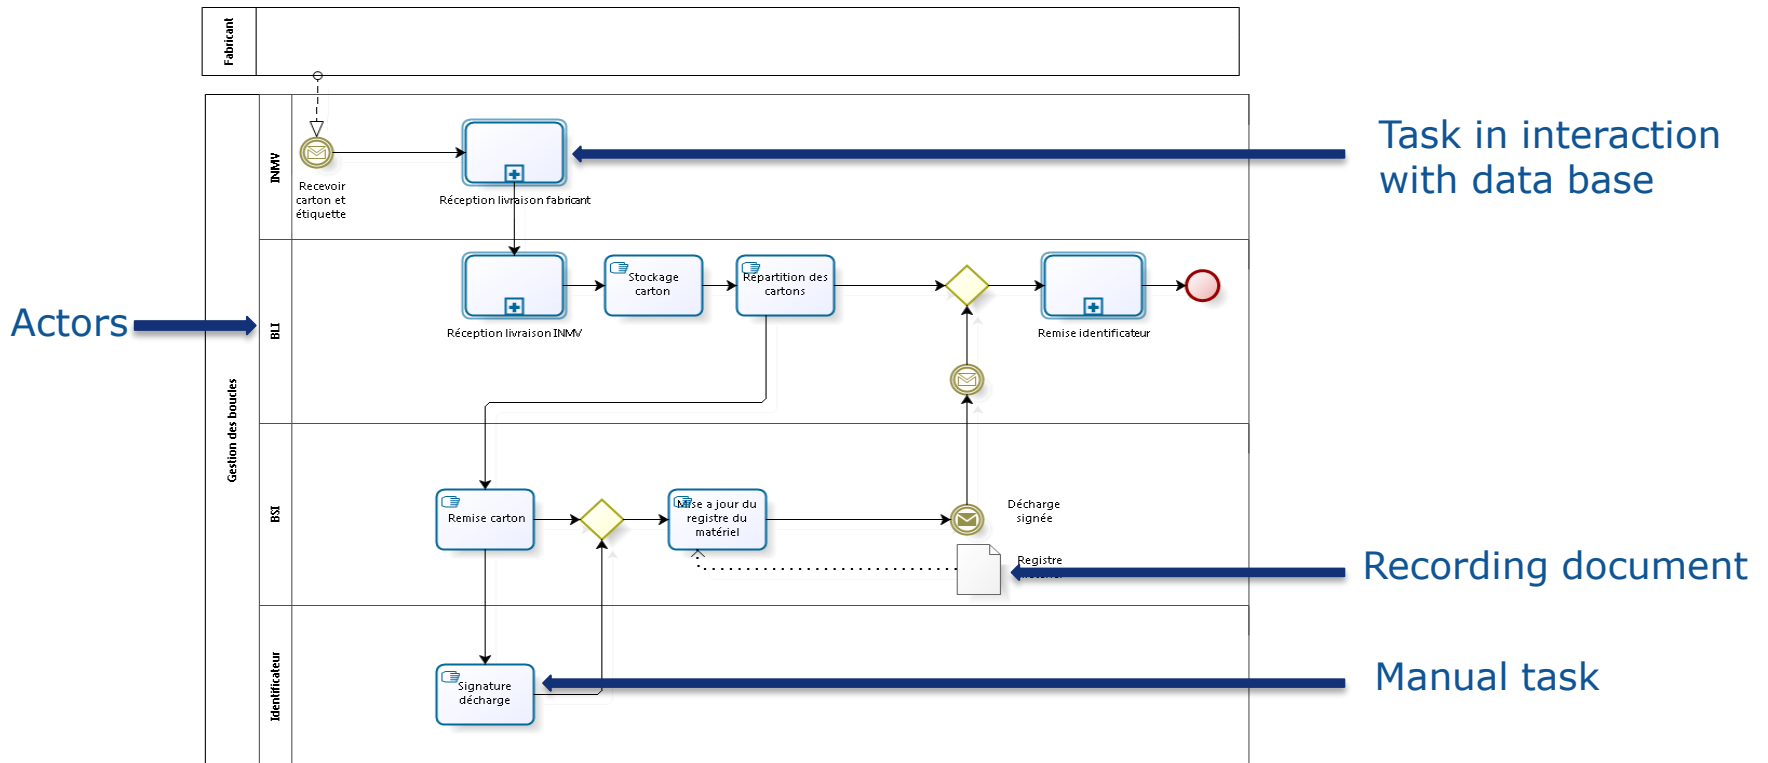

Benefits from a process based approach

- Definition of the expected results and of their users
- Enumeration of all the requirements to be met
- Better understanding of the activities required to deliver the results and of their interactions
- Illustrates the business requirements for the animal IRT information system
- A framework for quality management
- Pave the way to standardized processes similar to those existing in other sectors which may be implemented by standardized software packages
