

Revista española de estudios agrosociales y pesqueros
(Spanish Journal of Social Agriculture and Fishing Studies)

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fish and Food, through the General Technical Secretariat, has spent many years developing, initially as a pioneer, a careful editorial policy in the field of social-agricultural sciences. In 1952 it founded the Revista de Estudios Agrosociales (Journal of Socio-agricultural Studies), that in 1994 entered a new era under the name Revista Española de Economía Agraria (REEA) (Spanish Journal of Agricultural Economics). But in 1976 it founded the journal Agricultura y sociedad (Ays) to give more space over to the sociological and historical aspects of the place of agriculture. After 1998 both publications were relaunched under the current name, Revista Española de Estudios Agrosociales y Pesqueros (REEAP).

The Revista Española de Estudios Agrosociales y Pesqueros is published every four months. It specialises in issues related to the rural setting, with particular focus on the agricultural, fisheries and forestry sectors, the agro-foods system, natural resources, the environment and rural development, as approached from the various social-agricultural sciences.

To assure the journal's quality, a rigorous process is followed in the selection and review of the original articles submitted. They need to be accepted by the editorial board for their subsequent review, on an anonymous basis, by two reviewers of proven scientific expertise. The acceptance of the originals ultimately rests with the journal's editorial board.

The authors are solely liable for the opinions issued in the articles published by the journal.
